Get to know more about DO Pla de Bages:

Indigenous grape varieties

Learn further about our wines produced by a combination of unique indigenous gems as Picapoll and Sumoll, which offer a taste of our land's true essence.

Climate and terroir

Within a mid-mountain Mediterranean continental climate, the Bages has the ideal conditions for wine cultivation: an exceptional microclimate, low rainfall and a strong thermal oscillation, as well as a clayey and calcareous soil.

Pla de Bages wines are impregnated with balsamic notes of lavender, thyme and rosemary. These aromatic plants populate the forests of pines, oaks and holm oaks that surround the vineyards. These peculiarities make the Bages an optimal area for the obtaining of wines of great identity.

Vinification techniques

The DO Pla de Bages uses a number of organic viticulture techniques, including cover cropping, composting, biocontrol, neem oil, and sulfur. Winemakers in the region also follow practices such as minimizing tillage, hand harvesting, using natural yeasts for fermentation, and aging the wines in oak barrels. Organic wines from the DO Pla de Bages are becoming increasingly popular due to their environmental and health benefits, as well as their complex and flavorful profile.

Quality designations

Nestled in Catalonia's heart, the DO Pla de Bages wine region has swiftly ascended to prominence for its exceptional wines, meticulously crafted under stringent quality guidelines. Red wines, the region's signature style, exude elegance and complexity, while white wines showcase refreshing crispness and vibrant aromatics. Despite its relatively small production, DO Pla de Bages wines are highly sought-after for their distinctive character, a testament to the region's unwavering dedication to quality and innovation.
